The arrondissement of Cahors is an arrondissement of France. It is part of the Lot département in the Occitanie region. Its capital, and of the department, is the city of Cahors.

History

[change | change source]

When the arrondissements were created in 1800, Cahors was one of them in the Lot department.<sup>[2]</sup>

Geography

[change | change source]

It is the westernmost and southernmost of the arrondissements of the department, with an area of  $2,179.3~\mathrm{km^2}$  (841 sq mi), [3] the largest in area of the department. It is the most populated arrondissement with 76,216 inhabitants and a population density of 35.0 inhabitants/km². [4]

The arrondissement is bordered to the northwest by the Dordogne (Nouvelle-Aquitaine) department, to the north by the arrondissement of Gourdon, to the northeast by the arrondissement of Figeac, to the east by the Aveyron (Occitanie) department, to the south by the Tarn-et-Garonne

(Occitanie) department, to the west by the Lot-et-Garonne (Nouvelle-Aquitaine) department.

Composition

[change | change source]

Cantons

[change | change source]

After the reorganisation of the cantons in France, [5] cantons are not subdivisions of the arrondissements so they could have communes that belong to different arrondissements.

In the arrondissement of Cahors, there is only three cantons where not all their "communes" are in the arrondissement; the other six cantons are completely within the arrondissement. The following table shows the distribution of the "communes" in the cantons and arrondissements:
